B.A.C.H.D.N.A: Beethoven's Love of Bach - Examined and Expressed

"His name ought not to be Bach, but Ocean, because of his infinite and inexhaustible wealth of combinations and harmonies."
- Beethoven

"The immortal god of harmony."

Just as Nicholas Kitchen has so persuasively demonstrated Beethoven's careful and deliberate use of underlines in the expressive markings of his manuscripts, so too did he add underlines to his correspondences when he wanted to make a particularly emphatic point, as he did about Bach in an 1801 letter to his publishers, the storied Leipzig firm of Breitkopf & Härtel.

As evidenced by the two quotes above, Beethoven's admiration for Bach was well-known in his time; the "not Bach, but Ocean" is a play on the German word, as Bach translates as a "small brook," such as might flow from a wellspring. And truly, Bach was a foundational source. As biographers Lewis Lockwood puts it, "The Well-Tempered Clavier had been a musical Bible for Beethoven since his Bonn years." That was thanks to the Leipzig-born organist Christian Gottlieb Neefe, who started giving Beethoven keyboard lessons at the age of 10. Biographer Jan Swafford notes that, "while outside Leipzig J.S. Bach's reputation languished in the shadow of his famous sons, Neefe understood the older Bach's stature and importance and synoptic quality of his Well-Tempered Clavier, a work in those years known only to a cultish few."

And Beethoven apparently was a quick study, for just two years later the following notice appeared in a Mannheim newspaper:

Ludwig van Beethoven..a boy of eleven years and of most promising talent. He plays the clavier very skillfully and with power, reads at sight very well, and...plays chiefly the Well-Tempered Clavier of Sebastian Bach, which Herr Neefe put into his hands. Whoever knows this collection of preludes and fugues in all keys - which might almost be called the non plus ultra of our art - will know what that means.

"Of all the Beethoven quartets, the String Quartet No. 14 In C-Sharp minor, Op. 131 is the most ambitious: How seven such contrasting movements manage to complement each other and be so convincingly bound together is a miracle no amount of musical analysis can explain," declares violinist Edward Dusinberre. The quartet also suggests that Bach may have served not only as wellspring of inspiration for Beethoven, but also as a late-in-life compass for a composer having to navigate through near-total deafness: Biographer Lewis Lockwood: "Bach alone is the true background figure for this movement, in particular his Well-Tempered Clavier and its array of fugal masterpieces."

THE PERFORMERS

Yeesun Kim

Heifetz 2020 Cello Faculty; Ensemble in Residence (Borromeo Quartet)

Hailed by the New York Times for her "focused intensity" and "remarkable" performances, cellist Yeesun Kim enjoys worldwide acclaim as a soloist, chamber musician and teacher. A founding member of the Borromeo String Quartet, Ms. Kim has performed in over 20 countries, and in many of the world's most illustrious concert halls and Festivals. Ms. Kim is a graduate of the Curtis Institute for Music, as well as the New England Conservatory. Ms. Kim currently serves on the cello and chamber music faculties at the New England Conservatory. She has collaborated with various artists including violinist Joshua Bell, cellists Lawrence Lesser, pianist Christoph Eschenbach, Leon Fleisher, Rudolph Serkin. She also has had opportunities to perform with the esteemed members of the Guarneri and Julliard String Quartets. She is a recipient of the Avery Fisher Career Grant, Chamber Music America's Cleveland Quartet Award, Lincoln Center's Martin Segal Award, and the Evian International String Quartet Competition as a member of the Borromeo Quartet. Individually she was the winner of the Ewha and Junggung National Competitions in Korea, and the Seoul Young Artists Award for achievement in music and academics. Ms. Kim currently performs on a Peregrino Zanetto cello, circa 1576, one of the oldest in the world.

Mai Motobuchi

Heifetz 2020 Viola Faculty; Ensemble in Residence (Borromeo Quartet)

Mai Motobuchi has earned distinction as a soloist, chamber musician, and teacher in her native Japan and the United States. Currently Motobuchi is on viola faculty at the New England Conservatory and Tenrikyo Institute of Music in Japan. She has collaborated with many esteemed musicians including, Yo-Yo-Ma, Seiji Ozawa, Leon Fleischer, Kim Kashkashian, and many others. She joined the Borromeo String Quartet in 2000 and since then has toured extensively with them. She has won numerous awards throughout her career including the All Japan MBS Youth Music Competition in 1989, the Henri Kohn Memorial Awards from the Tanglewood Music Center, and while she was a student at Rice University received the John and Sally Cox Award, the E. Dell Butcher Awards, and the Willie Muery Award, in addition to being named an Alice Pratt Brown Scholar. Motobuchi began playing violin and studied at the Tenrikyo Institute of Music in Japan during her formative years. She eventually went on to study viola at Michigan State University and Rice University in Houston where she earned her Master of Music. She followed with an advanced performance diploma from the Internationale Meisterkurze Koblenz in Koblenz, Germany. She currently performs on a Moes and Moes viola dated from 1988.

Nicholas Kitchen

Heifetz Institute Artistic Director; Violin Faculty & Chamber Music Coach; Ensemble in Residence (Borromeo Quartet)

Nicholas Kitchen's musicianship has been hailed by the New York Times as "thrilling, vibrant and captivating." He is one of the most active and innovative performers in the music world today, as a solo violinist, chamber musician, teacher, video artist, technology innovator and arts administrator. At sixteen, Nicholas began studying at the Curtis Institute where he worked with Heifetz Institute faculty member David Cerone and coached with such musicians as Felix Galimir and Mieczslaw Horszowski, and importantly spent five years working intensively with the great violinist and conductor Szymon Goldberg, as well as being included in the conducting courses of Otto Werner Mueller. Kitchen co-founded the Borromeo String Quartet that went on to study at the New England Conservatory of Music and won prizes at the Evian International Quartet Competition and the Young Concert Artists Auditions. The Quartet also received the Cleveland Quartet Award from Chamber Music America, the Martin S. Segal Award from Lincoln Center, and the Avery Fisher Career Grant. Nicholas has been extremely energetic in combining teaching activities with his concerts. Nicholas has taught at the New England Conservatory of Music since 1992, when at the conclusion of their studies the Borromeo Quartet became Quartet-in-Residence.

Kristopher Tong

Heifetz 2020 Violin Faculty; Ensemble in Residence (Borromeo Quartet)

Considered on the most exciting musicians emerging today, Kristopher Tong has been praised for his depth of insight, virtuosity, and creative flair. Tong has appeared under the baton of some of the world's most premiere conductors including Christoph von Dohnanyi, Kurt Masur, Paavo Jarvi, Charles Dutoit, Mstislav Rostropovich, and James Levine. He served on faculty in 2005 at the Yellow Barn Festival and from 2002-2004 was the Principal Second Violin of the Verbier Festival Orchestra. Tong began studying violin when he was 11 in a public elementary program and when he moved to Utah became a student of Leonard Braus. He received his Bachelors degree at Indiana University Bloomington, where he studied with the late Franco Gulli, Miriam Fried, and Yuval Yaron. He completed his Masters Degree at the New England Conservatory of Music under Ms. Fried.
